They do not make wooden nutmegs in England, nor white oak hams, but a London paper says: "For some time past the carcasses supplied by the contractor to the Wandsworth and Chapham Union have been sent in with the heads on, so as to ensure that the mutton was Southdown. At the meeting of the guardians, lately, Mr. Creswell (medical officer) produced the head of a sheep, stating that, in consequence of its suspicious appearance, it was washed with some soap and water, when it was found that it had been painted to give it the semblance of a Southdown."

One who is familiar with the subject, says: "I have known many men, and women too, who from various causes had become so much affected by nervousness that when they stretched out their hands they shook like aspen leaves on a windy day, and by a moderate daily use of the blanched foot-stalks of celery as a salad, they became strong and steady as other people."

Fonces and Fence Laws,

Judging from the discussions of our farm clubs we may suppose that farmers are beginning to realize that the true office of outside fences, and in fact of all fences, is not to keep out the stock of a neighbor but to restrain our own. As a result of this idea we see that laws prevent-A Detroit doctor says that one ing stock of any kind from running at large in the highways are gaining they extend is every year increasing. It is a mistake to suppose, as many do, that the fruit and grass growing between the fences of a public highway of right belong to the public. The public have only the right of passage over the ground, but have no right to its products, which belong to the owner of the adjoining farm. As soon as the traveler or the stock of the farm diverge on either side of the legal limits of the road they become trespassers to the full extent of the term. In strict equity it is no excuse that that there was no fence, for, as before stated, fences are to keep the proprietor's stock within bounds and not to keep others out. It takes a long time for us to get rid of the idea that 'a legal fence" must be "horse high, bull proof and hog tight." Sooner or later we will arrive at a point when every farmer will be the judge of the quality of his own fences, or in fact whether he will fence at all. Much has been said of the injustice and cruelty of a law which prevents the poor man from turning cabbage plants is just one plant his cow out in the public road. In more than when the Pilgrim Fathers the first place it is poor economy for any one to turn a cow into the pubic road.
